A scene in "The Heart of Paddy Whack," which Chauncey Olcott will bring to the Columbia next week, will delight those who know Mr. Olcott only delight those who know Mr. Olcott only as a comedian. As O'Mailey, the bachelor barrister, whom pretty Mona Cairn, his ward, has nicknamed "Paddy Whack," Mr. Olcott and Edith Luckett meet for a last chat before bedtime. Saddened by his love for the winsome Irish maiden whom he thinks it his duty to marry to another, Olcott feels that it is almost a final parting. But the pretty Mone has final parting. But the pretty Mona has other plans for her happiness, and her bachelor guardian forms their central fig-ure. She leads him on through a beautifully written scene, and its outcome sends fully written scene, and its outcome sends the audience home happily aware that their hopes for the conclusion of the romance are to be realised.

It is because of the succession of such scenes in "Paddy Whack" that Miss Rachel Carothers' company is so radically different from the ordinary play of Irish life. Henry Miller has taken advantage of the opportunities offered by the period in which the play is laid to present a fine production.

"The Master Mind," the thrilling mystery drama which enjoyed a long run in New York, will be the offering of the Peil Players next week. The play tells the story of a man, who, in order to be avenged on a district attorney, elects to become an arch-criminal.
